Hillary Parker

Award Winning Botanical Watercolorist

From her childhood, Hilary Parker knew she wanted a career that she could anticipate enjoying each and every day.

Toward that goal, she attended Florida International University and prepared for a career in art education. Following graduation, she taught in public schools, then in independent schools, and most recently in her home studio.

For 20 years of teaching, she's affirmed her first passion as an art educator for students from age six to 86.

Her work has been recognized in the US, Scotland, and elsewhere through the work of the juried shows of the American Society of Botanical Artists. Her first botanical art subjects were vegetables from her refrigerator while studying at FIU. Her subjects now include orchids, carnivorous plants, feathers, and more recently animals. All her subjects are found in nature..

She asked club members to leave the broken shells on the beach, saying they are the ones that interest her...they are the ones with the stories she seeks to understand and share through her art.

Hilary sells her paintings in fine galleries throughout the United States, including Anderson Fine Art Gallery on St. Simons. She continues to accept private commissions from individuals, interior designers, botanical gardens, and other clients.

(Club member Don Myers prepared this report.)
